PRESS RELEASE

You are very welcome to join us for the opening of

STATIONS OF THE CROSS
THROUGH THE EYES OF JESUS
by Jonathon Brown
at St Andrew's Fulham Fields
on FRIDAY 16th FEBRUARY at 7.30pm

Canon Pastor Martin Warner of St Paul's Cathedral will officiate; bread, wine, and cheese will be served.

JONATHON BROWN

is a Scottish artist who has been based in the hills north of Nice since 1992. Over twenty years ago a chance remark by David Hockney drew him slowly away from his early training as a philosopher and a career in arts journalism, towards painting and drawing. His recent show in the UK was a large exhibition of landscape pictures entitled "RoadMovies" at the Talbot Rice Art Gallery in Edinburgh in 2002 and "Stations of the Cross", an entirely new departure for the artist - as well as an entirely original perspective on the subject - marks Jonathon's first solo showing in London.

STATIONS OF THE CROSS

tells the story of Jesus carrying the cross to His execution, a journey from the trial at the hands of Pilate and the people, to the Crucifixion and Resurrection. Jonathon has chosen to give us 21 episodes on large hanging canvases two metres tall, done mainly in charcoal - a unique set of dramatic, observant images that are at times poignant and intimate, or agonisingly vivid.

ST ANDREW'S FULHAM FIELDS

is in W 14, on Greyhound & Star Roads and is a 5 minute walk south of Barons Court tube station, or the same south-west of West Kensington station. Buses 28, 74, 190, 391 and 430 pass as closely too.
